About Me

I have a masters degree in health education and have worked as a teacher, researcher, technical writer, and editor for health agencies, environmental engineering firms, and the state historical commission. I am presently retired and doing research on the wealth of collectibles my mother left to her loved ones. I enjoy the outdoors, especially hiking and swimming. ONE of my hobbies is to produce new useful and beautiful items out of items that normally would be discarded due to age and disrepair. I also recently started painting.
